The average yield of Indian corn for the whole country is not far from twenty-five bushels to the acre, and the total yield sometimes reaches one billion seven hundred million bushels. With the best husbandry, which means good seed, good soil, manure and tillage, it is not difficult to raise seventy-live bushels to the acre. If the fine, sound seed corn, with a good pedigree, would add only ten per cent to the yield of this crop, it would increase the annual yield one THAT THOUSANDS OF OUR BUSINESS MEN GO THAT THOUSANDS OF OUR BUSINESS MEN GO

He is suffering loss every year, probably from war of a fulle timely attention to this matter. He uses unsound corn, possibly, for seed, selects from the corn-crib the best he can find, or borrows from a neighbor as carcless as himself about the seed that he plants. A part of the corn rots in the field, and he has to plant over, which makes extra expense. The late, planted corn is caught by the frost, and he suffers loss in the large proportion of soft corn that he harvests. proportion of soit corn that he harvests The stever is not as well cured for fodder

The stever is not as well cured for fodder, and cattle refuse the mouldy mass. Heredity counts for as much in vegetable as in animal life. To get maximum crops, you must have seed periest after its kind, with the normal quantity of starch, gluten, oil, and other constituents that belong to it. The plant must be well fed, cultivated and ripened in its appropriate season to mature this kind of seed. We say, then, select your cans for seed corn, as they stand upon the stalk, in August or September-perfect cars, well gust or September—perfect ears, well capped. Put a string upon them, or some mark, by which they can be identified, and casped. The actual upon them, or some mark, by which they can be identified, and let them mature upon the stalk. To make sure of perfect drying, hang them up in bunches upon the South side of a building, or in a well ventilated loit or room with a fire in it. The perfect drying of seed corn is an important item. The corn should not be shelled until the cob is thoroughly dried. When you are ready for planning, pour the seed corn into a vessel of water, and skin off every kernel that floats. That which sinks to the bottom of the water is the best, and with suitable condition of soil and climate, will germinate and bear fruit after its kind. Corn yields very kindly to all intelligent efforts to increase its preductiveness and improve its quality. By selecting ears from stalks that bear two or nore ears, you can increase the number of ars. By selecting ears of twelve or more cars. By selecting ears of twelve or more rows, you can increase the number of kernels upon the cob, always provided that you give the corn plant food enough to do its best in the harvest. Farmers who look carefully after their seed corn, and raise seventy-five bushels to the acre, do not doubt that it is a paying crop.

Notwithstanding a decline of some 314c Notwithstanding a decline of some 34-c per pound since the atleged June corner, on a pality limiter of 1,500 packages, our butter market fill appears in a very critical condition. For that matter, many of the large and influential of extors lock upon the situation with seitous apprehension, and are strong in denunciation of the methods through which a portion of the trade have succeeded in hydrogia matter. trade have succeeded in bringing matters to their present state. In the face of a magnificent dairy season, and thus for probably the largest make for many years, a few speculators, and through many years, a few speculators, and through their indicence, too, many misled producers, have persistently overlooked the experience of last year, and instead of resorting to every reasonable means tending to keep supplies in motion, have ordered ton after ton of butter into store, in what has proven the vain hope of forcing buyers to terms. The result is that to-day an aggregate of certainly not less than 100,000 packages have accumulated at this point, with some pstimates adding 25,000 to the above amount, with 1;2xy daily receipts still coming in. And what is to become of it all? The home trade seems to be getting it all? The home trade seems to be getting along very well on odd arrivals from this state and the stock they carry on their own State and the at the prices generally ask-ed exporters do not want it. Stripped of its verbiage, one of the principal argued exporters do not want it. Stripped of its verbiage, one of the principal arguments is, that exporters "must" take the stock. This is ridiculous, and there is no "must" about it. Eugland has for several seasons past demonstrated a happy faculty for getting along with a very small quantity of butter when the cost was high and absorbing liberally when the rate was cheapl and certainly if she could declare her independence of the American effering last year, she can do so this, with her own product and that of the neighboring countries showing quite an increase and oleo in most attractive and deceptive form meeting a large proportion of the conand oleo in most attractive and deceptive form meeting a large proportion of the consumption. Continental, buyers also are quite as indifferent toward everything except, low and circup stock; but obtaining this, would become fair customers. Some of our holders have taken the built by the horns and made a breng within a day or two, through which a few saies on foreign a count were negotiated; but the aspiring a cultators, to protect (?) their yellow elephant, have already commenced bidding the market up again and driven off many operators who were about ready to negotiate. Indeed, the chance to sell appears to send holders off at a tangent at once. and they retire behind their barricades to await the attack that will probably never attractive terms is adopted. It is probable not 20% for creamery might act as a fair ventre, but from present appearances it would not be amiss to prepare for sometang lower on a large proportion of the supply, or carryit over until sorting and let suppers at that time decide what they will give for it. Spipers can no doubt do this very nicely through experience, obtained juring the early portion of the present year.

I know whereof I speak, for I have passed through the very experience myself.
Nearly ten years ago, I was the picture of health, weighing more than 200 pounds, and as strong and healthy as any man I ever knew. When I felt the symptams I have above described, they caused me annovance, not only by reason of their aggravating nature, but because I had never felt any pain before. Other doctors told me I was troubled with malaria, and I treated myself accordingly. I did not beheve, however, that malaria could show such aggravated symptoms. It sever ocsuch aggravated symptoms. It rever or curred to me that analysis would help solve the problem, as I did not presume soive the problem, as I did not presume my difficulty was located in that portion of the body. But I continued to grow worse. I had a faint sensation at the pit of my stomach nearly every day. I felt a great desire to eat, and yet I loathed food. I was constantly tired and still I could not sleep. My brain was unusually active, but I could not think connectedly. My existence was a living misery. I continued in this condition for nearly a year; never free from pain, never for a moment happy. Such an existence is far worse than death, for which I confess I earnestly longed, restoration more in detail, and concluded as follows:

My complete recovery has caused me to investigate the subject more carefully, and I believe I have discovered the key to most ill health of our modern civilisation. I am fully cor fident that four-fifths of the diseases which effect humanity might be avoided were the kidneys and liver kept in good condition. Were it possible to control the action of the sun, cyclones could undoubtedly be averted. That, however, is one of the things that cannot be. But I rejoice to say that it is possible to control the kidneys and liver; to render their action wholly normal, and their effect upon the system that of purifiers rather than poisoners. That this end has been accomplished largely by means of the remedy I have named I do not have a doubt, and I feel it my duty to make this open deciaration for the ealightenment of the profession and for the world.
